

Office of Digital Equity Government to Citizens Georgia GMIS Award

Clayton County's Department of Information Technology, Office of Digital Equity, led by Takiyah Thomas, Digital Equity Administrator, has received the Government to Citizens (G2C) Award from Georgia Chapter of Government Management Information Sciences (GA-GMIS).

This award is given to government agencies that fulfill their mission of collaborating with and serving other entities, particularly citizens.

"We are proud to have received this competitive award, which recognizes the Office of Digital Equity as the best example of G2C for the year among Georgia GMIS member agencies," said Interim Chief Information Officer Jaime Montalvo.

The purpose of Georgia GMIS is to provide a forum for the exchange of ideas, information, and techniques to foster enhancements in hardware, software, and communications development as they relate to government activities. Georgia GMIS mission is to maintain an atmosphere of trust, support, and mutual respect among all GMIS members while working to foster an environment of openness and candor in the internal decision-making process.

The G2C award achievement is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the Office of Digital Equity team to ensure the best possible service to Clayton County citizens. The Office of Digital Equity is committed to continuing efforts to bridge the digital divide and to help ensure all citizens have equal access to technology.
